WED. MARCH 19, 4-6:30 PM
BALLENTINE HALL 109

"¿Puedo Hablar? May I Speak?" is a new documentary film by Sol Productions which chronicles the 2006 presidential elections in Venezuela. Sol Productions spent nearly three months in Venezuela, filming interviews and events with people from across the political spectrum. The documentary offers its audience a portrait of a Venezuelan society at a crossroads; a re-elected President Chavez, challenged by a mounting opposition; a divided state, but one from which the Sol team manages to extract glimmers of hope for renewed dialogue and a bridging of the political gap. Join the IDC for a screening of the film with its producer/director, Christopher Moore, followed by a panel discussion of democracy in Venezuela with IDC members Shane Greene, Jeff Gould, Christiana Ochoa, and IDC Director Jeff Isaac (moderator). This event is sponsored by The Center for Latin American and Caribbean Studies, the Communication and Culture Dept., the IU Law School, and the IDC.
